

I am writing to voice my opposition to Sinclair's decision to air "Stolen Honor". In airing this partisan attack on John Kerry, Sinclair is behaving more like a state run media outlet, a.k.a. the Soviet Union's now defunct TASS New Agency, than a legitimate private broadcaster.

If Sinclair must air "Stolen Honor" then at least the FCC should require them to provide equal time for an opposing perspective, such as also presenting the documentary "Going Upriver: The Long War of John Kerry," which provides a positive account of Kerry's service in Vietnam and his anti-war activism upon his return.

The presentation of only one side of the issue by a private broadcaster is a dangerous precedent and endangers our democracy.

Sincerely, Peter B. Dedek
